CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.

Name.

The name of the Institute shall be "THE NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF LETTERS, ARTS, AND SCIENCES."

ARTICLE II.

Organization.

SECTION 1. The Institute shall consist of Academies, not less in number than three, each of which shall be composed of not less than thirty Members, nor of more than two hundred, to be elected as hereinafter provided.

SECTION 2. The following Academies shall be first established :

- I. The Academy of Letters and the Fine Arts.
- II. The Academy of History and Philology.
- III. The Academy of the Metaphysical and Ethical Sciences.

IV. The Academy of the Political, Social, and Legal Sciences.

V. The Academy of the Mathematical, Physical and Mechanical Sciences.

VI. The Academy of the Natural Sciences.

VII. The Academy of the Medical Sciences.

SECTION 3. Each Academy shall regulate its own affairs in a manner not inconsistent with the Constitution and the By-Laws of the Institute, and may submit matters of business to the Council for its determination.

SECTION 4. Members of any Academy shall have the right to attend the meetings of any other Academy of the Institute (except those of a purely business character), and may read memoirs and participate in the debates when invited to do so. Members of one Academy may be elected to membership in the other Academies.

SECTION 5. When it is in contemplation to form an Academy of the Institute, those, not less than thirty in number, desiring so to do, shall signify their wishes to the Council in the following manner :

“The undersigned, citizens of the United States, desire to organize an Academy of the National Institute of Letters, Arts, and Sciences, to be called the ACADEMY OF and respectfully request the authority of the Council of the Institute for that purpose.”

A copy of this request shall be sent by the Secretary to each member of the Council ; it shall be read at two successive meetings of that body, and, a quorum being present, a vote shall then be taken thereon. If agreed to by not less than three-fourths of the members present, the authority to act shall be given by the President in the name of the Council, and the Academy so authorized shall be organized by the signing of this Constitution, and by the election of officers, within thirty days thereafter ; otherwise the authority shall be null and void.

SECTION 6. The provisions of Section 5, relative to the formation of Academies, shall not be applicable, so far as obtaining the authority of the Council is concerned, to the organization of any one of the Academies mentioned in Section 2 of this Article, provided action be taken on or before the thirty-first day of December, 1868. For the organization of one or more of these Academies before that time, it shall only be necessary that thirty or more of those who sign this Constitution proceed, with the authorization of a committee duly appointed for the inauguration of the Institute, to the election of officers and the appointment of members to represent the Academy in the Council.

SECTION 7. After the organization of an Academy, as provided for in Sections 5 and 6 of this Article, nominations to membership must be made in writing, at a business meeting, by at least two members who are personally acquainted with the candidate, and who must certify to his good moral standing, and specifically set forth his claims to admission. The application shall then be referred by the President to a Committee, who shall thoroughly inquire into the claims of the candidate, and report thereon to the Academy at its next business meeting for nominations and elections. Should the majority of the Committee report adversely, the name of the candidate may be withdrawn; but should one-fourth of the members present demand a vote, it shall be taken. If three-fourths of the votes be in favor of the candidate his name shall be reported to the Council by the Secretary; and if accepted at the next meeting of the Council by a like vote to that of the Academy, the candidate shall be enrolled as one of the Academy electing him, and as a Member of the Institute. Business meetings for the nomination and election of members shall be held at least quarterly, at such stated times as the Academies shall respectively appoint, and due notice thereof, and of every special business meeting, must be given to each member of the Academy. Twenty members shall constitute a quorum.

SECTION 8. The Officers of an Academy shall be :

- A President,
- A Vice-President,
- A Secretary, and
- A Treasurer,

each of whom shall hold office for two years, or till his successor is duly appointed. Each Academy shall elect its own officers, but shall report its action to the Council, for approval.

SECTION 9. The Academies shall have power to establish Sections, with the approval of the Council, which Sections shall each elect a Chairman and a Secretary.

SECTION 1. The officers of the Institute shall be :

The five Trustees first elected shall determine by lot which of them shall hold office for two, which for four, which for six, which for eight, and which for ten years.

The property of the Institute shall be held or transferred by them, or their successors, as the Council shall direct.

The Treasurer shall execute a bond for the due performance of his duties, in such form and sum as the Council shall prescribe.
